Ready For Hiccup?

"Hiccup, calm down! You don't have to do this!" Astrid yelled, scared at what her lover wanted to do in his fury. He stared at her from his spot with a look of murder in his eyes.

"It's his fault! If he want's to touch Toothless ONE more time, He'll have to die!" Hiccup exclaimed.

>Three hours earlier

Hiccup woke to toothless nudging him.

"Hey, bud." He said, the first smile of the day sprouting on his lips. "How are you?" In reply said dragon nodded to the open doors and Hiccup laughed. He wanted to go on a morning flight. "Let's go!" He jumped out of bed and mounted Toothless and he flew out the doors, the wind rushing around them. Hiccup looked down at dragons edge and smiled at what he and his friends (Along with maybe ten berkians) had created in under a week. Toothless flew higher and further away from the island, Hiccup knew He was getting tired of seeing the island by now. Because of how much time the past couple day's they've spent stranded examining the dragon eye. They both needed a fresh cup of water by now. "How bout we head to the island we saw on the map that homes thousands of terrible terrors." Hiccup said, pointing to the north. Toothless coed in responce and their directioning changed. It took maybe two hours by night fury to get there. Once they landed Hiccup knew Astrid would kill him when they get back so late. His stomach growled.

"Let's go hunting." He declared taking out his shield. It was old but still worked. They walked quietly in the woods. Sure enough moments later three terrors came running past them followed by at least twenty more. "Careful." Hiccup smirked and picked up one that had fallen. The tiny dragon stared at him before flying out of his hands. "We should come here more often." Hiccup joked looking at his friend.

"Oh how much I wanna get the thing from those Berkians!" hiccup heard something from deeper in the forest. He motioned for toothless to be quiet as they went to invistagate.

"Dagur." Hiccup whispered, glaring at the man through the trees. He was walking in circles around a pile of wood used for a fire. Many baserker soilders sitting around him, unsure what to do about their leader seeming to be going insane.

"I had ONE chance to get it and it was ruined! All because of my _SISTER_." He glared at the memory. "Maybe heather the mutton head is a better name for her." He growled.

"Come on Toothless." Hiccup whispered. They shouldn't stay. Hiccup turned and his hands were up in the air when he saw two baserekers behind him with crossbows pointing at him dangerously. One grabbed him and the other muzzled Toothless.

"Sir!" The man holding Hiccups arms behind his back painfully made the deranged cheif notice them.

"Hiccup, Hiccup, Hiccup." Dagur smiled evily. "What are the odds? Tie them up. Seeing as you look empty handed, I can use you to get the dragon eye!" Dagur laughed with a crazy air to him as Hiccup was tied up. They were relentless. His whole upper body was tied with rope. There was no why without a knife for Hiccup to get free. He was stuck.

>"Where is he?" Astrid looked around from her seat on stormfly. The group had set out on a search after Hiccup and toothless didn't return after an hour.

"What if something bad happened?" Fishlegs said looking around aswell.

"Let's hope not." They had been flying for nearly and hour and a half and her worry was getting deeper and deeper. "There!" She shouted. two plasma blast had hit the air. "They might be in trouble!" They flew in the direction of the blast and Astrid has never been more right. "Dagur." The ship was armed but they didn't shoot straight away. Toothless was muzzled but they must have made him shoot to get their attention. What caught Astrid attention was Hiccup. He was tightly roped up. and dangling from the sail.

"Let Hiccup go!" Snotlout was the first to speak up.

"Give me the dragon eye!" Dagur yelled. He pulled the robe that went all the way up to Hiccup so he was pulled higher. Hiccup muffled something through the gag and struggled with the binds only to start turning in the air. Astrid never saw him tied up like this and it scared her.

"Fishlegs." Astrid began, trying to sound as calm as possible.

"The dragon eye is back on dragons edge." The bookworm answered

"Then we go! Attach your dragons to my ship and get us there quickly otherwise it's bye bye Hiccup!" Dagur ordered. Astrid wasn't about to do that. With Hiccup dangling like that, the harsh movement of waves and dragons he might swing around and hit the mast.

"We can't do that until you let Hiccup down." Astrid argued. Dagur tore a knife from his belt and aimed it at Hiccup.

"You know how will a shot I am, Astrid. Get going." Astrid looked away in a resentful silence. But lowered stormfly with the others so they could get the ropes tied on their dragons feet. They started the journey back. Astrid looked behind them at Hiccup. They locked eyes before a big ripple in the water caused him to swing around and she held her breath. This was gonna be a long flight.

>after a scary dizzing hour Hiccup felt the boat stopping. He had felt like hurling plenty of times but stopped himself. His ribs had to be bruised from smacking into the mast several times. He knew dagur had known it would hurt. Then to his and the other dragon riders relief He was lowered. almost down Dagur let go of the rope and he fell to the deck, falling over. Toothless ran over and nudged him with the muzzle. Hiccup couldn't give his dragon any sign of his being ok as someone grabbed him and started getting him untied.

"Get the dragon eye. The exchange will happen." Dagur demanded. Fishlegs left and Astrid got off her dragon and jumped on the boat. She pushed the soilder away and started undoing the rope herself. When she finished she took off the gag. Dagur took Hiccup from her. "Not until I get the eye." He gave her an evil smile and pulled Hiccup's arms roughly. Astrid glared at him as Fishlegs came back. She took the eye and slowly, oh so slowly, held it out to dagur. He took it and pushed Hiccup towards her. Then did the unexpected. He took his knife, and threw it at toothless. The roar of pain that came from the nightfury brought fury to Hiccup's eyes. His best friend was in pain.

"You did not just do that." Hiccup growled.

"Oh yes I did." Dagur laughed looking at the dragon eye. Astrid ran to toothless with the others. She knew what was gonna happen next. Hiccup had a short fuse when it came to someone hurting or making fun of toothless. Hiccup took a few threatening steps towards dagur and the chielf unconsciously backed up slitghly.

"How dare you." Hiccup said in a low whisper. Then he sprang at Dagur, pinning him to the ground. "No one!" Hiccup screamed punching the stuned man. "Touches toothless!" He punched dagur again, hearing an oddly satisfying crack as he broke the monsters nose. When the soilders went to get Hiccup off Dagur they rolled over. Dagur now on top of Hiccup. The blood from his nose dripped on Hiccup's cheek and Dagur went for a strike. Hiccup grabbed his fist mid way and forced his arm to turn. Enough as Dagur hated to admit, he screamed in pain as Hiccup took his spot back on top of him. Hiccup got up a little so he could kick Dagur in the ribs. savage went to attack Hiccup but with a single glare from the teen had him frozen in place. Hiccup kicked and punched Dagur multiple times before running over to Astrid, who had pulled the daggar out of toothless. He grabbed the sharp weapon, covered in dragons blood and walked back to dagur who was still downed. He dragged Dagur into a stand and locked his arms around him with the sharp of the weapon against his throat.

"Hiccup, calm down! You don't have to do this!" Astrid yelled, scared at what her lover wanted to do in his fury. He stared at her from his spot with a look of murder in his eyes.

"It's his fault! If he want's to touch Toothless ONE more time, He'll have to die!" Hiccup exclaimed. He put pressure on Dagur's neck, piercing the skin slighlty.

"Hiccup." Astrid said, trying to stay calm. Toothless came walking up to her, free of the muzzle. He had cloth wripped around his stomach were the knife was thrown but he was fine. and worried for his rider. Hiccup's fury seemed to calm down at the sight of his dragon up and ok. He still pushed the dagger on Dagurs neck more. "Don't do it Hiccup." Astrid said, trying to stay as calm as humanly possible. The other riders watched in fear. Hiccup visably loosened his grip on the dagger but not on the baserker. Astrid walked closer as slowly and not unexpected as she could. Once infront of them She took the knife and the riders breathed sighs of relief. Even though Dagur was evil, Hiccup wasn't the kind of person to kill his enemies, and Astrid could tell when Hiccup calmed down he would have an anxiety attack and get upset they let him kill him. He must have been mentally and physically exhausted because of all the action and the fact that he was dangling in mid air for over an hour, and collapsed taking Dagur down with him. Astrid pulled dagur away and lifted Hiccup up with Snotlout's help. The twins kept watch on the baserkers as Snotlout and Astrid got Hiccup on top of stormfly.

"Now what do we do?" Snotlout asked.

"You guys take the ship far away from here, make sure the catapults are disabled. I'll get Hiccup home. we can deal with them later." By home of course, she meant his house on dragons edge. They did as told and the baserkers were soon out of sight.

"I will get you Hiccup!" Dagur yelled, though Hiccup was unconscious. "I will get you if it's the last thing I do!" Astrid shook her head in disgust and stormfly took off to Hiccups house. Toothless took the short cut on foot. When she got him in bed his eyes opened.

"What happened?" he asked rubbing his head.

"You past out after beating up dagur." She explained.

"Really?"

"Yeah. you don't remember?"

"I rememeber toothless being stabbed. is he ok?" as if on cue the black dragon came bounding in, coeing to his rider,

"You must have been in such a blind fury, that you weren't conscious of your actions." Astrid said matter of factly. "Remind me not to get on your bad side with toothless." Astrid joked. They laughed a little then went quiet. "You almost killed him." Hiccup stared at her for a minute or two.

"Thanks for stopping me." He finally said. She nodded and kissed his cheek.

"get rest. I'll make sure the twins or snotlout don't get you angry again." She smiled before leaving the boy and dragon to their thoughts. four hours later after Astrid gave Hiccup food and made sure Toothless was ok, the others returned. Along with the dragon eye.
